

Leading Load Testing Solution Company Neotys Opens New Office in Massachusetts to Meet Growing Demand

Marlborough, Mass– June 14, 2011 – Neotys, a leader in easy-to-use, cost effective load testing tools for web applications, announced today it has opened a new U.S. headquarters in Marlborough, Massachusetts. The office will be the headquarters for the U.S. operations and will be headed by Gerald Labie, CEO USA of Neotys.

Neotys has been in business since 2005 and is a leading provider of performance testing software for web applications. NeoLoad, the company's flagship product brings an unprecedented level of ease of use to performance testing. It enables users to perform tests faster to identify and remediate performance problems, while providing full support for all new web technologies. Neotys now has over 1,100 customers in 60 countries including several hundred in North America.

Demand for the company's solutions is on the rise. To help deliver against this increased demand, especially in the United States, Neotys has scaled up its U.S. Operations. In addition to the new office, Neotys recently appointed a new VP of marketing, Jonathan Bracken.

“Today's web applications are the engine of innovation, delivering tremendous value to users, while enabling organizations to compete more effectively than ever before. Consequently much more attention is being paid to ensuring applications meet performance targets before launch; IT departments are looking for load testing solutions that are easy, efficient, and cost effective,” said Gerald Labie, CEO USA of Neotys. “This trend is reflected in our company's growth and market interest in our NeoLoad solution, now with its fully integrated cloud capabilities. We are gratified by this and plan to build on our success by continuing to invest in product innovation, services and customer support to solidify Neotys' leadership position in the web application performance testing space.”
